plainly appears to be the case, for when it is stated that the law affects only goods which are shipped within thirty days of their completion all that appears to be necessary is to increase production to such a point that a surplus can be established, to remain in storage for a month's period and then sent into interstate commerce as if there was no child labor law in existence. There is no restriction on the employment of children, according to the practices of the past, under such a law, and there is no violation when children are employed in the manufacture of goods so delayed in shipment. Rather does the amendment point the way to that very circumvention of the law, and it appears that the bill as passed is therefore two sided. It pretends to check child labor but at the same time shows how child labor can be used without breaking the law. That being the case those who consider that the desired effect is not nullified are due for an awakening.

THE NEW CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

There has been much to commend in the work which has been done by two of Norwich's civic organizations in their efforts to build up and aid in the progress of the city, but just at the present time the best step taken has been the decision by the members of the Board of Trade and the Chamber of Commerce to abandon their organizations as they have existed in the past and join together in a new Chamber of Commerce of Norwich to be state and to be affiliated with the state and national bodies of the same name.

Norwich is not a large enough community to permit two organizations which are working to the same end to operate without more or less friction and jealousy. What is needed is the building up of all its citizens and instead of pulling apart. Unity of purpose and unity of action has long been needed and nothing has brought it to light more plainly than the experience which has resulted during the past few years. One powerful and active organization constantly at work for the progress of Norwich is far preferable to two weak and struggling ones which pay more attention to what the other is doing than to the real object of their existence.

In bringing out a full realization of this point it is possibly a good thing that the city has passed through its recent experience. It is time now to give the new and united organization the support it deserves and let the effects show in the benefits to the community.

LOCATING AND SUPPRESSING VILLA.

Villa has shown by his raid upon the city of Chihuahua that he has not been disposed of as a menace to the de facto government of Mexico. He has shown that the efforts which have been put forth by the constitutional forces to run him down have amounted to little or nothing or else they have not seriously undertaken such a task, for Villa still extends his arms and is able to strike when he pleases.

It is therefore an interesting side-light which is cast upon the situation in Mexico by the delegates in attendance at the conference at Groton when they "pointed out" that if Villa had been located by the action at Chihuahua, the task of running him down would be greatly simplified. It was suggested that if Pershing's forces should be withdrawn from Mexico, Villa would take their place and thus prevent Villa from raiding to the northward, and it was further believed that General Trevino would now pursue Villa relentlessly. All of that sounds well, but General Trevino is not expected to be protecting Chihuahua and yet the Mexican forces under Carranza did not prevent him from raiding that city. They have not even gone to the trouble to locate him, but left it to Villa to disclose himself.

Such being the case, how much dependence could be placed upon a Mexican force preventing him from making other such raids as he conducted against the town of Columbus? The time for the relentless pursuit of Villa was months ago and not after he has been given plenty of time to add to his list of depredations.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Everything seems favorable for a late stay at the seashore except the weather.

The man on the corner says: One of the supreme joys of life is to find that the gas company made a mistake.

The new premier of Greece is said to be the friendliest Venizelos, too, how does King Constantine feel on the subject?

If it is impossible for the Carranza troops to find Villa, he has no trouble in getting near enough to strike at Mexican cities.

When the street railway heads in New York refuse to arbitrate, they seem to be taking the president's advice pretty seriously.

Good cabinet making appears to be a lost art in Greece, for the fact that those who are really clever at it are suffering from a lack of it.

It is a merry chase in the Balkans with the Serbs driving the Bulgars, the Bulgars driving the Rumanians and the Rumanians hot foot after the Austrians.

The public is not only a direct party at interest in that New York trolley strike but it has already commenced to figure in the list of killed and wounded.

Villa has been causing more trouble in Mexico but of course Carranza had rather have him around than to cooperate with General Pershing to put him out of business.

In order not to be mistaken for any old submarine, the officers of the Bremen should have furnished a picture of the long expected submarine merchantman in advance.

Nothing more dastardly can be imagined than that of handing out a bottle of poison tablets by an auto party to a three year old in Pennsylvania under the guise of candy. That fellow deserves the full penalty of the law.

Truth telling doesn't get very much encouragement from that sentence of two minutes imprisonment in a court-room chair and a one cent fine imposed upon a young man in the west for telling a falsehood to get into the postal service.

WHY THEY CUI

"Look at 'em, Lou! Oh, have a look!" weakly begged the young person with the high white shoes that were considerably run over as to heel and dubious as to color, as she tied on her ruffy apron over her plain black frock and prepared to meet the afternoon onrush at the soda counter. "Just coming in on the stripes!"

"My sakes, Dell!" gasped her dupli- cate, patting out her own apron bow. "Just fellow that'll wear an orange and green tie with a purple and black skirt and a Palm Beach suit and pink socks ought-a be shot! Why, it ain't style to wear stripes!"

"Ain't it awful!" gloomingly agreed Dell, returning from her somewhat frenzied imitation of labor, work that she had just started to take the orders! "I was trying to get my apron particular as you told us, Lord, how I hate that man! You'd think he owned the place instead of just being manager! What's he to do?"

"Yes, Mr. Sykes!" I wasn't talking. I was just giving my order, in detail, like you told us to, special! When a girl tries to be as particular as she can and can't get it right, it's mighty hard on me, say, Lou, sometimes I think I'll just go into hysterics and break up the show when Sykes looks on me so unjust as he does! Working here till we drop and then landed on for every breath!"

OTHER VIEW POINTS

For many months after his inauguration I thought of President Wilson. In the end I came to see that he has a greater power than any other man in public life to say one thing and do another and get away with it—Gifford Pinchot.

We wonder what the President would do if the railroads should get together and serve notice that they would tie up every road in the land. They are now getting ready to do fifteen per cent. What a pity the railroad directors are so few and have not more votes to cast next November. But think of the money they could make threatening the president and congress.—Rockville Journal.

Inland waterways are necessary according to Secretary Daniels before the Atlantic deeper waterways connection in Philadelphia. That may be carried out; but when you see shipping on a river like the Connecticut go to decay, it causes many to wonder what use natural waterways can be put to at the present time before the government expends millions in the building of new waterways.—Middletown Press.

President may be re-elected and the country suffer from four years more of the same trouble-making ineptitude.

That kind of an argument may appeal to a certain type of mind. The bulk of the American people, however, are infinitely more interested in the welfare of the United States than they are in the welfare of the present Administration. They are defining loyalty in the broad terms of the good of the country. And the good of the country today demands just the proper criticism of the Administration at many points, and in November the transfer of the management of our foreign affairs to experienced, sagacious and far-seeing men.—Minneapolis Journal.

What to Save and How to Save it. The chief use of the kitchen is for the preparation of food, and one of the greatest wastes in the household arises here, because the housewife does not always know the best methods of preparing foods. She wastes a great deal of food in the kitchen. A great deal of food is wasted because it has been put in too cold, too wet, or too dry a place.

The animal food products, meat, fish, eggs, lard, butter, milk, cheese and eggs keep best in a slightly damp, cool, well-aired place. They will keep well if wrapped in oil paper. Fresh meat has to be kept longer than usual, brown the outer surface quickly with a hot knife, and keep in a cool place. A great deal of food is wasted because it has been put in too cold, too wet, or too dry a place.

From left-over food many attractive dishes can be made. Cereals can be moulded and fried. Sour milk can be used in pancakes, gingerbread and cornmeal. Cheese can be used in many different dishes. Dry pieces of bread can be ground up and kept on hand for breading cutlets, chops, or fish. These crumbs should not be too old, and the vegetable in which they are kept should not be air tight.

From meat or fowl should be saved, rendered out in boiling water and used for frying. Left-over fruit juices, if in large quantities, can be sealed up for winter use. Small quantities may be boiled down into a syrup for puddings. A good grade of vinegar can also be made from fruit juices.

It is decided in Philadelphia that, as the school year has been cut short owing to the epidemic of infantile paralysis, the high school students should attend school an hour longer each day. This leads to the New York World's suggestion that the longer day should be adopted for all advanced pupils at all times. It is not a bad suggestion, and with that extra hour it might be possible to cut the four-year high school course to three years and thus make a great saving in time and expenses in the education of the country. If necessary, it is not an eight-hour school day?—Wabterbury Republican.

The municipal concerts which have provided the best in programs and interpreters have shown that, the rank and file has a better appreciation of the good and noble things that are generally believed. Ultimately the time will come when the public will outgrow the idea that it must have a lot of extra music to give them adoration to the ensemble rather than to one interpreter whose art, however great, is not worth the money which a saving and misguided public now pays. Things will be evened up and there will be an opportunity for the real lover of music as well as the make believe devotee, to hear the best for little money. It is a matter of evolution and time must be taken to work out the problem.—Meriden Record.

The meat supply of America is seriously threatened by the demand for meat from abroad and the end of high prices is probably far distant on that account. There were no exports of meat to England, France or Italy before the war but now there is an ever-climbing quantity with values climbing faster than the weight as shown by the fact that $14,000,000 worth of meat was exported in 1914 was only 6,400,000 pounds. This suggests that there is no more favorable time than the present for the American housewife to undertake the reform of her diet for the benefit of the family purse, for the days of lower prices for meats are as distant as the end of the war.—Wabterbury Republican.

The failure of the long-heralded submarine to appear in the Atlantic so far as the world knows, constitutes one of the mysteries of the war. Most of the speculation has been concerned with the possible fate of the Bremen. Observers have wondered whether she foundered en route through some mechanical defect.
